This is now confined to a small portion of Washington and Center streets and the ground covered is altogether inadequate for the comfort of the people. The streets up and down Washington for four blocks from the city hall, and two blocks on either side should be sprinkled every day. If this was done regularly we would not experience the unpleasantness of the dust we had last fall and winter. Then the sprikling was not begun till the dust was three or four inches deep, and it was almost impossible to get water enough on it to make the streets firm and hard as they would have been had the work been done sooner, and in the latter case it would take less water to do the entire season than the amount necessary to put the neglected streets in good or even medium condition. It might be well to look into the relative costs and conveniences of this matter and adopt the best and cheapest plan for comfort, Phoenix has two beautiful plazas and it would enhance their appearance very much if seats were put around their borders and along the walks, so that if one so wished he could go and spend a pleasant hour. Most people work during the day and they do not feel like standing during the rest of the evening, Phonix is excellent as a health resort and is being advertised as such. When people come here they expect some conveniencies with which they can entertain themselves at least, and they have a right to. Thus would make the parks much more attractive and at the same time Phoenix would not be doing anything more than all other cities of even less population do.

It would only cost a reasonable amount to get one of the Phoenix bands to play on the plaza three nights out of the week, and it would, during the warm months be a pleasant place to spend the evening. This amount could easily be made up by private subscription for Phoenix citizens, as a rule, wish to see the city prosper.
